Al-Furqan's Digital Library Portal gives scholars and researchers across the globe access to this wealth of newly-discovered material, much of which has been vastly underexploited to date. In doing so, the Foundation brings together the many communities who share a common interest in the preservation of Islamic heritage.

In 1989 the Foundation set up a research project to investigate, as comprehensively as possible, the present state of Islamic manuscript collections extant worldwide. Scholars were identified and commissioned to carry out a survey in more than 100 countries. The outcome of this project was the World Survey of Islamic Manuscripts publication.

Sample task: Find libraries with Islamic manuscripts collections in The Netherlands

Country: The Netherlands
City: Leiden
Library: Rijksuniversiteit te Leiden, Bibliotheek (University Library)

Contact: Witte Singel 27, Leiden
Telephone: 071 - 527 2614 (Information desk & Circulation desk) 071 527 2600 (Reception desk) 071 527 2632 (Secretary)

Date of establishment: This is the library of the oldest state university in the Netherlands (founded in 1575). The library was founded in 1587.

Status: Institutional

Total number of Islamic MSS: Presently the Leiden library owns some 23,000 Oriental manuscripts which mainly originate from the Middle East (ca. 5,200) and Indonesia (ca. 15,000).

Description of Collection: From the very beginning of its existence, the study of Oriental languages in Leiden University has attracted Islamic manuscripts to its library. Famous collectors in the first century of its existence were J.J. Scaliger (died 1609), Jacobus Golius (died 1607) and Levinus Warner (died 1665). The Leiden library has continued to collect Oriental manuscript materials till the present day, and is the only public institution in the Netherlands still to do so. In Leiden University Library are deposited the Oriental manuscript collections of a number of public institutions and private persons in the Netherlands. Most Middle Eastern manuscripts are of Islamic content. Approximately one third of the Indonesian MSS are of Islamic content, the others being mainly Hindu and Buddhist. Most Islamic languages are represented in the collection. In alphabetical order they are: Acehese (Sumatra, Indonesia), Albanian, Arabic, Barber, Buginese and Makassarese (Sulawesi, Indonesia), Baru (Indonesia), Ceram (Indonesia), Fulbe, Gajoland (Sumatra, Indonesia), Hausa, Indonesian, Javanese, Kurdish, Mndurese (Madura, Indonesia), Malay, Minangkabau, Pashto, Persian, Sasaki (Lombok, Indonesia), Sundanese (Java, Indonesia), Turkish, Urdu. Being a state collection, the library provides constant care for the physical condition of the Oriental MSS. New acquisitions often arrive in a mediocre state and are gradually being restored. The older collection is, on the whole, in good condition. A few of the MSS from Indonesia suffer from oxidation of ink, whereby the paper is gradually being destroyed. This process cannot, it seems, be stopped. The Oriental collections of the Leiden library are, generally speaking, fairly well catalogued. A more detailed, chronologically arranged, survey of the published catalogues (listed in the Library Catalogue Collection page). Apart from the printed catalogues, there is the Library's Oriental collections' inventory. It is kept by the Library's curator and, being an administrative instrument, it is not available to the public. Lists of recent acquisitions are regularly made available to visitors in the manuscript reading room. There are no unpublished catalogue data in the hands of private scholars. All subjects are collected by the Library. The oldest dated manuscript from the Middle East was copied in 252 AH [866 CE]. There are earlier, but undated, Islamic materials in the library. The youngest Middle Eastern manuscript dates from the beginning of the 20th century. Manuscripts from Indonesia are usually not older than ca. 200 years. The Library has a modest collection of microfilms (ca. 1,650 films) of Oriental manuscripts kept in other collections. Most of these are of Islamic materials. An unpublished list, which is regularly updated, is put at the disposal of visitors to the manuscript reading room. The Library publishes, through Leiden University Press, a series of catalogues of manuscripts under the title Codices Manuscripti. It also maintains a collection of handbooks and manuscript catalogues in the Oriental MSS reading room, as a service to researchers of its MSS holdings. An effort is made by the Library to make the holdings of its MSS holdings available to researchers of its MSS holdings.

The screenshot shows the 'Manuscripts' section of the portal. The top navigation bar includes categories: Everything (56411), Manuscripts (47811), Maqasid (1730), Our Library (4452), Our Publications (159), and World Collections (2164). The 'Manuscripts' category is selected. Below the navigation, there are tabs for 'Refine' and 'About'. The main content area is titled 'Browse by Results' and features a 'Browse by...' dropdown menu set to 'Library'. Below this, there is a list of library collections with columns for 'Library', 'Names', 'Topic', and 'Date Compiled'. The list includes entries from various countries such as Albania, Algeria, Burkina Faso, Iraq, and Ivory Coast.

The Manuscripts Collection

The gateway to Islamic manuscripts builds upon the significant work already accomplished by the Foundation through its published catalogues. In this collection, users will be able to browse and search more than 50,000 manuscript records previously published by the Manuscript Centre.

The online platform facilitates the discovery of major 'hidden' Islamic manuscript collections. The extent of the manuscript details recorded varies from the basic handlist to comprehensive descriptive catalogues including details such as incipit and explicit, quality of paper, ink, binding, and calligraphic style.

In addition, there are other private libraries that were incorporated in that into the manuscript general holdings of Dir al-Kutub, without recording their provenance. The private libraries, comprising art collections, catalogued in these eight volumes, belonged to: Mustafai Faidi, al-Shanqiti, Qawalah, Halim, Khalil Agha, Tulut, al-Taymir Pasha. The manuscripts in this catalogue are diverse, including the Noble Qur'an and sciences, creed (aqidah), jurisprudence (fiqh) and legal theory (usul al-fiqh/far'iyah), inheritance rules (far'iyah), prophetic traditions (Hadith) and sciences, Sufism, Arabic grammar, etc.
